

Art

Your Concise Chicago Art Guide for Fall 2022

Your list of must-see, fun, insightful, and very Chicago art events this season, including the Chinese American Museum of Chicago's Spotlight Series, Black life and lineage, female empowerment, and more.

Susannah Papish September 7, 2022

Miles MacClure, "(making up people, and other fun activities)" (2022), mixed media installation, dimensions variable (courtesy Baby Blue Gallery)

Queen Bey dropped Renaissance and households all over Chicago's South Side and beyond are celebrating #4onthefloor and #housemusicalnightlong, and venues south of the city's Loop bring that energy to the early fall season. Our first Chicago art guide focuses on the South Side, with exhibiting artists contend with the 75th anniversary of the Partition of the Indian subcontinent, being a young Kuwaiti feminist painter, and reflect on Black American memory and healing, and personal familial narratives.

Liz Vitlin, "DSC02040.JPG [September 30, 2005]" (2022), digital print, 4 x 6 inches (courtesy the artist)

Liz's Childhood Computer

Liz Vitlin's exhibition at Prairie presents a selection of works from her ongoing project Liz's Childhood Computer. Extracted from the dusty hard drive of a computer custom-built for her by her father, these are ambiguously uncanny works. Vitlin transplants her salvaged videos, photographs, and Microsoft Word compositions from the fuzzy world of early digital media to the gallery space.

Prairie (prairie.website)

2055 West Cermak, Chicago

September 24–November 5